

Biometrics

Biometric access control is commonly used for controlling access to restricted areas. Instead of relying on an access card, a biometric system verifies the identity of an individual using biometric markers like fingerprint/facial recognition/iris or others before permitting access. Saflec Systems are suppliers of the world's leading biometric access control terminals including Morpho/Sigma and Hikvision.

